

CLASSROOM EXPECTATIONS

Room _____ . _____

- 1

You come in ready.

Materials in hand, in your seat, working on what's up when the bell rings. Not almost ready — ready.
- 2

You bring your actual effort.

Not your best-day effort. Your today effort, whatever that is. Show up and do the work. That's the standard.
- 3

You listen when someone is speaking.

Eyes up, phone down, waiting your turn. This applies to me and to your classmates.
- 4

You disagree respectfully.

If you think something is wrong, you say so — directly, with reasoning. You do not dismiss, ridicule, or roll your eyes.
- 5

You own your work.

Yours means yours. Mistakes are expected. Excuses are not. If something goes wrong, we figure out what happened and fix it.
- 6

You stay in the work.

When a task is hard, you stay with it before you ask for help. When you're lost, you say so. "I don't get it" is the beginning of learning, not a reason to stop.
- 7

You respect what isn't yours.

Desks, supplies, and other people's belongings are treated accordingly.
- 8

You follow through.

Deadlines exist. Commitments matter. If something comes up, you talk to me before the due date, not after.
